

Discipline of the Woodpile.

Every human male man who possesses even a lingering taint of temper should keep an ax and a woodpile somewhere handy, that he may rush out and work off his wrath when it waxeth fierce. There is nothing in this vain old world that will send a man back to his appointed work with a more wilted collar and a truer comprehension of himself than thirty minutes' wrestling with a full flavored ax. He can use it so fiercely in the wood. All the fury of his nature, all the hate he feels for his enemy, he can infuse into the ax handle; and how the chips will fly! Not very artistically, probably, but they will fly. And presently it begins to dawn upon the man that he is feeling more calm. Evidently he is experiencing a change of heart. He does not hate his enemy at all. He changes his stroke and begins to chop on the system of Italian penmanship—the up strokes heavy and the down ones light. He rather loves his enemy now.

At last he puts all his failing strength in one terrific blow. He misses his tip with the ax and smites the chopping block with the handle. A tingle, as though he had swallowed an alarm clock, goes from elbow to hip and back again, the ax drops from his powerless hands, and a weak, lump, nerveless, perspiring, trembling, gasping thing, he staggers to the house, lies down on the first thing that looks like a lounge, and is ready to die. There isn't a fear or a fault in his heart. Death has no terrors, and life has no temptations for him. He has chopped out all his baser nature, and he is just as ethereal and spiritual as he can be on this side of Jordan. It is a great medicine.—Ex.

The New Woman Fad.

The world's intelligence approves the movement for the emancipation of woman from false social standards and unfair social conditions, but some grotesque accompaniments of the movement are worthy only the contempt of all manly men and womanly women. For example, the present new woman fad, which talks jauntily about woman's independence, proposes that we have a "Woman's Bible," and in various ways preaches a bold assertiveness for women. The whole tendency of this order of things is to disgrace woman and to cast disrepute upon all legitimate efforts for the betterment of her status. Woman's high prerogative is that she is the natural home maker of the world. As daughter, sister, wife, mother, this is Heaven's commission for her. If any progress has been made in these last days by women the finest fruits of that progress are seen in the better physical health, the better food, the better care of child life, in short, the better social and moral conditions of the homes of the nation. We confess to a hearty contempt for any order of "woman's movement" which obscures in the least this queenly character of woman as the angel of the home. Bold declamation about her "rights" is a pitiful descent from her mission, unless the "rights" involve her privilege to be a womanly woman at home.—Baptist Union.
